CONGRATULATIONS
KU GRADUATES!

Class of Spring 2015

KU

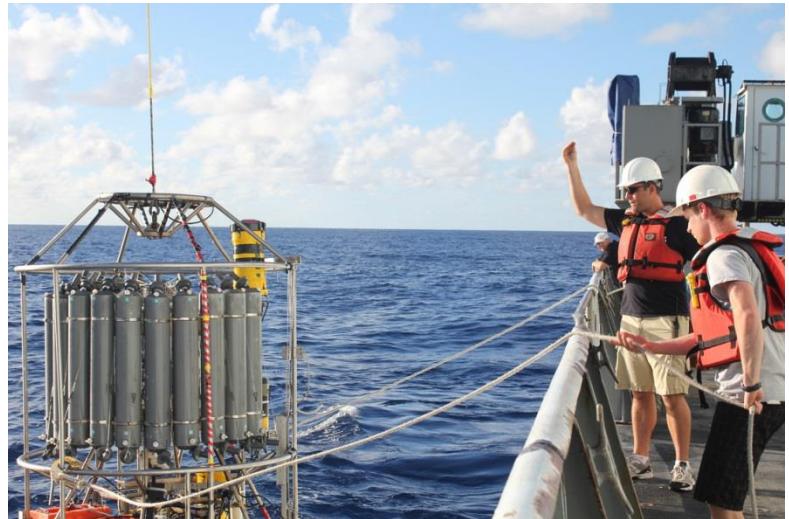

More than 1,300 graduates will walk during KU's spring commencement exercises tomorrow. The ceremony for the Colleges of Business and Education will be held at 9 AM and the Colleges of Liberal Arts & Sciences and Visual & Performing Arts will hold their ceremony at 2 PM, both in the O'Pake Fieldhouse. The ceremonies will be telecast via an interactive broadcast platform, enabling the families and friends of the graduates to view the ceremony live through a web connection or locally on KUTV. Kutztown University has received a five-year, $614,375 grant from the National Science Foundation (NSF) to encourage incoming freshman to join the computer science major. Each year, the grant team will select a minimum of six students meeting certain criteria established for the grant. The students chosen will receive $7,800 a year, plus an $800 stipend and book allowance. Students interested in receiving this award will be required to complete an application and essay; other determining factors will include their grade point average, test scores and financial need. Kutztown University is introducing five new minors which will be open to students for the fall 2015 semester, including astronomy; digital communication and new media; entrepreneurship; Spanish for modern business; and supply chain management and logistics. Read the story here.

Nepal Relief Fund – We have three KU students from Nepal who, along with the International Student Organization, has begun an effort to raise funds for earthquake relief in the country. A fund has been established with KUSSI to collect and distribute funds. We are still taking donations from events, groups, or individuals this week. Funds can be given to Jerry Schearer (Community Outreach Center) or Leah Cassellia (Student Involvement Office). Any checks can be made out to KUSSI. All funds will be given to the Red Cross and the World Food Programme, who are already on the ground distributing food, emergency shelters, and medical assistance. You are welcome and encouraged to donate directly to any organization you choose. Thank you for your support.

Associate Professor of German Lynn M. Kutch recently organized an event as part of the Northeast Modern Language Association (NeMLA) convention held in Toronto from April 30 through May 4. In her capacity as the NeMLA German Language and Literatures area director, and in cooperation with the Goethe Institute Toronto, Kutch arranged a multi-media reading by Austrian graphic novelist Gerald Hartwig. Accompanied by his brother on guitar, Hartwig provided the audience with a "performative reading" of excerpts from his largely autobiographical Chamäleon.

(below) Congratulations to Mary Kate Henry who won the prestigious Society of Publication Designers 17th Annual Student Design Competition. KU's Adam Leisenring also placed third. This international competition was judged by Ian Doherty (Art Director, Food Network Magazine) and Leah Bailey (Deputy Art Director, Money), with the assistance of SPD's Student Outreach Committee. The jury consisted of Thomas Alberty (Design Director, New York); Marc Davila (Art Director, Departures), Chris Dixon (Creative Director, Vanity Fair); Jenn McManus (Art Director, Martha Stewart Living); and David Schlow (Creative Director, Men's Journal).
